THE 1ST ANNUAL AWARENESS WALK

WALKING FOR A STRONGER TOMORROW

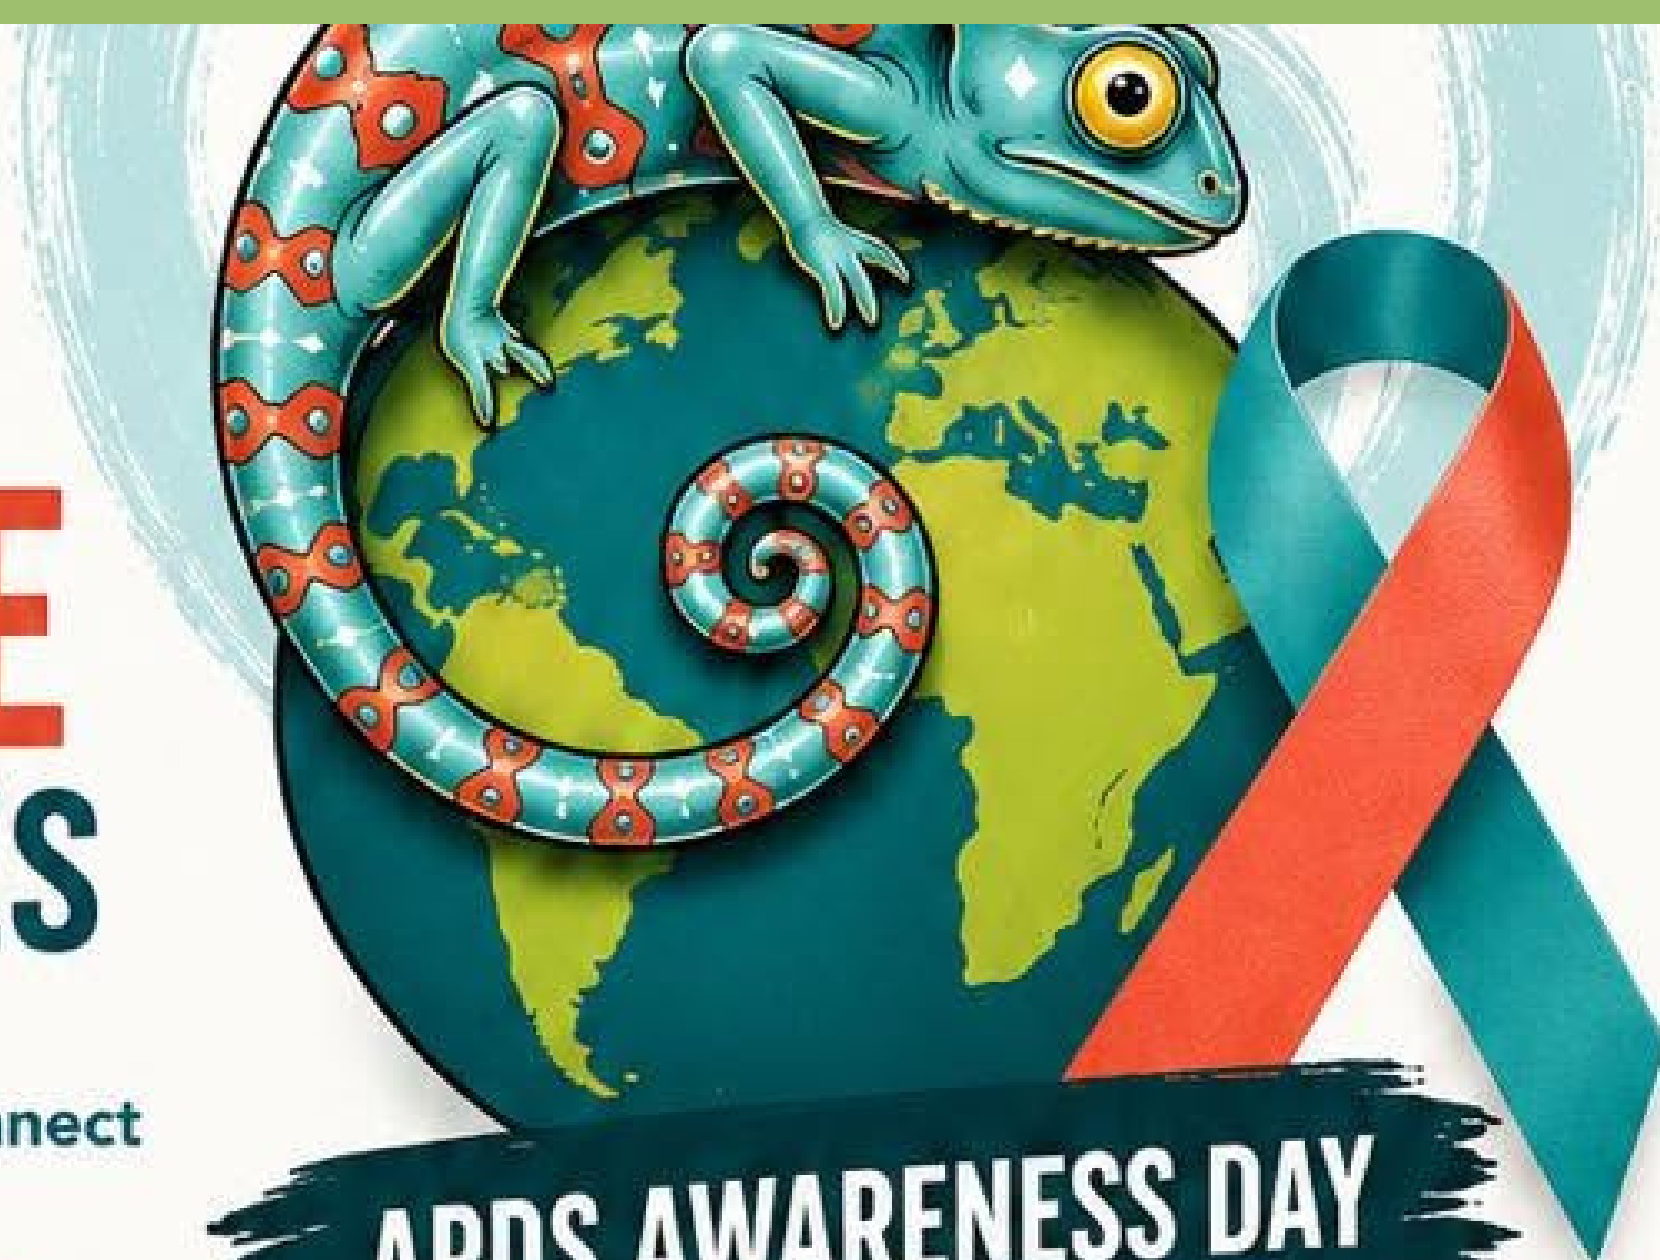

SATURDAY
OCTOBER 3RD, 2026
PHOENIX, ARIZONA

Activated PI3K-delta syndrome (APDS) is a rare, primary immunodeficiency that affects how the immune system works. People with APDS may have lower levels of certain white blood cells, called B cells and T cells, which help protect the body from germs like viruses and bacteria. When these cells don't work as well as they should, it can be harder to fight off infections.

APDS can look different for everyone—some people get sick more often or have more serious infections, while others have only mild symptoms or may not notice any symptoms at all.
